

And so I knew how to stretch out on the sand

And so I knew how to stretch out on the sand

To forget the rest of life advancing

Chaotic, infernal, delighting in madness

If the hands did the rest

The trees emitted crazy perfumes

The skin spoke like nobody

The heat surrounded everything

In order to conceive life

To an eternal summer

And I fell from an abyss

Without pain

Arriving at the sea was easy

Everything was so close

Two serpents meeting each other

Becoming one

To slither again

Yet with force

Opening their enormous mouths

Soundlessly

Animals know how to do things

Touching with my hands

The skin, the soul, but even deeper

To give gifts

To those who want them

Without looking at the face

Without knowing the name

The round summer

Tastes of new fruit

Very quickly consumed

In the memory